"Today's teenagers, more than any previous generation, will be required to take more personal responsibility for actively managing their finances throughout their lives. The corporate pension plans and generous benefits enjoyed by many of the parents of today's youth are not likely to continue at their current levels, and some plans and benefits may disappear altogether." (National Endowment for Financial Education, 2006)

The Personal Financial Management course was designed to educate students about sound financial management, planning practices, and to develop financial decision-making skills. Students enrolling in this course should be at the junior or senior level. There are no prerequisites for this course. This semester course was designed from the Ohio Department of Education, Family and Consumer Science Content Standards. Students enrolling in this course will be required to take an online end-of-course assessment.

Key components will include:

- Income and Financial Decisions based on personal values
- Income & Benefits
- Savings & Spending Plans
- Wise Use of Credit
- Insurance & Taxes
